Network.
Consciousness.
Resilience.
Empathy.

As a neutral organisation, the Netpathie association brings together various experts on the topics of internet use and safety, respectful behaviour and mental health in order to provide sustainable support and encouragement for parents, schools, teachers, children and young people on digital issues.

Netpathie develops workshops and interactive tools (physical and digital) based on expert knowledge and insights from teachers, parents, children and young people. The target groups deal with the topics in a playful and intrinsically motivated way. In this way, a sustainable understanding and awareness of digital media can be created and mental health strengthened

We create awareness for the digital world

Children grow up in a world where internet surfing is a normal part of their daily life. The virtual world harbors dangers, but it can also open up many opportunities for young users. Protection, empowerment and participation are essential for this. Netpatie is the leading association for on-line safety for children and schools.

This also includes strengthening your mental health, your identity and treating each other with respect. The tension between virtual and physical space is more present than ever.

We network, because together we are stronger

The subject is a particular concern of school authorities, teachers and parents. How should the correct use of the Internet be sustainably integrated into the classroom? How can awareness be created? How do teachers and parents keep access to children and young people in the virtual world? Which contact points can help?

Together we are stronger. Netpatie brings all stakeholders together, coordinates the cooperation, supports school authorities, teachers, parents and children in order to anchor the topic sustainably in the classroom and in everyday life – interactively on site, physically experienced and with suitable teaching aids. We encourage children to use the Internet with workshops and project weeks.
